The Proof Is In The Reading

As a child I absolutely loved summer holidays, 6 weeks of freedom... If you have children by the time you get this newsletter they will probably have been off school for one or two weeks and excitement may have turned into "I'm bored", in which case you have my sympathies! Maybe you are busy getting ready for a holiday abroad – yeah! Or maybe you are trying a staycation this year in which case I will keep my fingers crossed for you with the weather. As a child one of the worst things about summer holidays were how quick the shops and supermarkets wanted to remind you that soon it would be "back to school" time, and pencil cases and book bags were on sale before you knew it.

However if you are footloose and fancy free maybe you will be visiting one the many music festivals still to take place this year, Glastonbury and T in the Park may have gone but you could still enjoy Creamfields in Cheshire on 28th-29th August, it is the UK's No.1 dance festival and over the last 11 years has held the crown as the world's best dance festival. If you are heading to Ibiza on holiday then maybe your dates will coincide with the Radio 1 Annual Dance Marathon on 6th-8th August, kicking off with Annie and Pete returning to Ibiza Rocks Hotel for a huge outdoor free party with some big name guests. If however rock is more your thing then head to the Reading & Leeds festivals on 27th-29th August. Guns 'N' Roses kick off proceedings in Reading and close the show in Leeds, the adored and acclaimed Arcade Fire make their eagerly awaited headline debut at the festival and the feverishly anticipated return of Blink-182 will excite all rock fans. Other incredible names appearing on the main stage over the weekend include special guests The Libertines, the hottest new rock stars Paramore and kings of cool Queens Of The Stone Age. However, if you have children between the ages of 14-18 then the needn't be left out. On Sunday 1st August the Underage Festival returns to Victoria Park in London. This year's line up includes

Clairvoyant Vultures?

The recent World Cup in Africa has placed a spotlight on their traditional medicine. Believers practice smoking dried vulture brains imagining it will create visions and enhance performance; ranging from predicting the winning lottery numbers to boosting exam success, luring more clients to a business and picking a winner at a horse race.

The brains of the vulture are dried and then rolled into cigarettes which are smoked or alternatively inhaled as vapours. The theory behind a Vultures brain being able to provide clairvoyant powers comes from the knowledge that they have acute vision and a strong ability to find prey and people also think the birds have incredible foresight.

Healers can sell a tiny bottle with just a speck of ground brains for about 50 Rands (4.50 Euros). With an entire bird going for 2,000 Rands. Vulture bones or feathers can also be mixed with herbs to make medicines. According to a study by two wildlife groups at least 160 vultures are sold each year for muti. Traditional use as it is currently happening is likely to render vultures extinct in southern Africa on its own within 20-30 years. Vultures are protected by law, but so far this has been ineffective.

Luckily we do not need to turn to the endangered species to get clairvoyant help, we cannot promise you the lottery numbers but we can provide you with highly accurate psychic guidance. Go to www.psychicproof.com and select a reader.
